Comments: As a graduate student at a small graduate school, my library has access to journal articles on Ebsco, but if the article is not available with full text there, then I need to use interlibrary loan to get the article. I couldn’t do complete research without it.

Comments: I have used ILL several times in the past and have been thrilled with the result. All the books have been out of print and it has been SO nice to be able to get them. Recently I have been able to read a book published in 1932 about the rise of Hitler. There have been many before that too.

this was a simple process. Much appreciated. P.S. I am a distance student living in Texas. A region, in which I live, below, was not applicable so I had to check one!

Comments: When I think about the job we had to do to find an article at the library 20 years ago, as opposed to today! What a great difference! I can work at home, in my PJ’s, with a Whisky instead of crawling in the middle of a bunch of card catalog! Thank you for the facility.

Comments: Having used this service since its inception, I have had access to hundreds of journal articles otherwise beyond my capacity to access. It has been an invaluable research tool for teaching, writing, and my own educational growth. ILL is one of the great ideas of those who provide access to information. My mother was a librarian so I, in a sense, grew up in a library. Thanks to ILL and all those great periodical data bases I have access to much of the world’s information.
